DEDICATION

More than once a semester, Chris Miller will preface his slides with, “If you have a weak stomach, you might not want to see this,” before plastering a photo from his latest hunting expedition on the screen. Then, the class will follow Dr. Miller in a memorized song of the entire Old Testament . . . while he runs from one side of the room to the other with the motions to the words. Dr. Miller’s passion for the Bible is contagious.

After teaching at World of Life Bible Institute for ten years, Chris Miller and his wife, Pam, moved to Cedarville University for the small-town atmosphere, the Midwest attitude, and the proximity to Indianapolis, where both their parents lived at the time. The required Bible minor at Cedarville helped Dr. Miller make the decision.

Behind this unforgettable Bible professor is a loving and supportive family. Chris and Pam married on June 2, 1980, and as their daughter stated, “Without his fabulous wife, who holds the perfect balance of love, patience, and organization, the mindless professor would have lost his keys, glasses, cars, and kids a long time ago!” They have three children: Mindy, Tim, and Christi, and two grandsons: Jack, born in 2007, and Hunter, born in 2010.

Dr. Dan Estes, Dean of the School of Biblical Studies, said that “Chris listens very carefully and makes wise decisions. He is very good at taking care of all the out-of-sight and behind-the-scenes details that need to be done to make everything run smoothly and look effortless. He’s like a musician who does all the hard work in playing to make the whole thing look and sound effortless.”

Though his career is a big part of his life, Chris finds time for other activities. These include hunting, hiking, skiing, walking to Mom and Dad’s, and attending church at Grace in downtown Cedarville.

Chris’ father, Earl Miller, who is ninety-two-years-old, was a World War II B17 pilot and flew 25 missions over Europe. He is and always will be Chris’s hero. Dr. Miller takes amazing care of his father and goes to his dad’s house almost every evening, further evidence that Dr. Chris Miller has devoted his life to serving others—his students, his children, his wife, and his father—just as God has called us all to do.

“Well it’s hard to list just one thing I love about my husband, but I guess I’d say his sense of humor. In everything, he has always been able to make me laugh!”

FALL

noun \ 'fol \ Often characterized by sideways rain, bipolar weather, and the start of a new school year.

GETTING STARTED

It was a humid Friday in August when cars began pulling in at Cedarville University. Early arrival freshman students, their cars loaded with everything necessary to live for a year, were directed to get their key. A line reached from the DMC to the SSC, the freshmen students' faces bright with excitement. The new Printy RD, Charmaine Porter, held a sign attempting to reassure parents. It read: "Don't worry, Mom, we'll take care of your baby." With a welcoming party of RAs, new and returning students, with the help of the Getting Started staff, the Resident Life staff, and even some professors, unloaded cars and tried to fit too much stuff into tiny rooms. Collin Mitchell, an RA in Lawlor, broke the record for the most number of mini-fridges unloaded: nearly sixty over the two days of Getting Started. Immediately, students found their roommates and began bonding over shared interests.

On Friday night, a welcoming party for early arrival students was held between the SSC and DMC. A mechanical bull was the highlight of the night, lines moving fast as one student after another flew off the bucking bronco. A few accidents occurred in the intense blow-up obstacle course and on that bull, but the victims quickly forgot about their injuries when frozen fruit bars were offered as consolation prizes.

As mom and dad drove off, the students were propelled into meetings, sessions, and small groups, trying to figure out what to do with the freedom of college life. Freshman students devoured the information that would help them through the rest of their college career at Cedarville.

With classes and work on the horizon, students enjoyed their last bit of free summer time by catching up with old friends and meeting new ones.

"Seeing friends from last year was great, and Getting Started was so much fun, even though it POURED on Saturday! Being an RA and Getting Started are the only reasons why any sane upperclassman would be at the Early Arrival Party."

(Sarah Wilson)

1 The Lawlor RAs clutch a box of Krispy Kreme donuts stolen from the Printy RAs as Dr. Brown smiles in their midst. 2 Families of freshman students wait in the line stretching from the Dixon Ministry Center to the Stevens Student Center. They need their keys! 3 Printy RA Leanne Dykstra holds up a sign reminding parents to get a key before their student can get into the dorm room.

FALL CONFERENCE

Freshmen scrambling to claim free pews, upperclassmen reuniting from long absences, hymnals marking saved seats, and the traditional fire hazards of book vending surrounding the seal and Dixon statue are all ritual of the always highly anticipated Fall Bible Conference. It's a time when faculty, staff, and students can come together and celebrate the new academic year by worshiping and enjoying a keynote speaker. Since Chapel is very much of a part of students' daily routines, the Fall Bible Conference has become a sort of homecoming for the Cedarville University community as it beckons in the new school year with a strong spiritual focus. It is a fervent Cedarville tradition to start the school year with the university solely focused on God.

Fall Bible Conference speakers have been known to come from all over the world to deliver their messages to Cedarville students, and this year was no different. Students were thrilled to hear that a past chapel favorite, and no stranger to Cedarville's campus, was returning to be the keynote speaker. Chris Williamson, founder and pastor of Strong Tower Church in Franklin, Tennessee, joined Cedarville's community for the second time to enlighten, encourage, and move students to live life without excuses. Throughout the conference Pastor Williamson challenged students to grow in their faith and, for the second time, left a lasting impression on Cedarville University. In usual Chris Williamson fashion, he kept chapel interesting throughout the conference by including personal anecdotes and even performing an original rap. It was clear through his enthusiasm and his interactions with students that Pastor Williamson's love for Christ and for people manifested itself throughout the Fall Bible Conference.

"It's such a good idea to start the year off focusing solely on God and His glory! And Chris Williamson is a dynamic preacher who is down to earth and so profound, yet simple, in his teaching of the Word of God."
(Charmaine Porter)

HOMEcoming

"Road Trip: Find Your Way Back" was the theme for this year's homecoming weekend. The first weekend in October was preceded by a week of alumni chapels showing the current students of Cedarville how to uphold the theme for the year, Real-World Impact. Even De Maurice Smith, the head of the NFL Player's Association, made an appearance during the week this year.

Reunions were spaced throughout the weekend, making time for volleyball and soccer games, and even an alumni baseball game. Homecoming traditions brought back old times for alumni and created new memories for new students, especially those just entering Cedarville.

Living up to the theme of the weekend, floats in the annual Homecoming Parade ranged from "Back-to-the-Future" to OPE's comical version of the Exodus, claiming it as "The First Road Trip." Even the library workers joined in the parade with carts made to look like cars. Staff and students passed out yellow and blue balloons to onlookers, throwing out candy along the way.

Saturday started bright and sunny, the weather perfect for the annual parade, but soon turned rainy and cloudy; Cedarville homecoming attendants were not deterred. Instead of allowing the weather to dampen their spirits, the student body-elected "royalty" kept their spirits up and the smiles on their faces.

Like every year, the weekend blurred together in reunions with old friends and remembering and reliving the Cedarville experience, if only for two days. Cedarville knows how to have a homecoming and knows how to keep its students coming back, even after they graduate.

"I love when the alumni come back. In twenty years, I want to come back and see all the changes that have happened on Cedarville's campus, just like I imagine so many of the visitors today do."

(Bethanne Linden)

1 Dr. Brown, looking especially hip in his aviators, passes out balloons to Homecoming parade onlookers. 2 Homecoming Queen and King, Katherine Watson and Nathan Flack, ride the streets of Cedarville in style in a bright red sports car. Being Homecoming King might be worth a ride in the car. 3 The ever-present Cedarville Yellow Jacket mascot fist-bumps basketball game fans at Moonlight Madness to start the season off right.

HOMECOMING

1 Seth Flamm leads OPE's homecoming float. The men's service org calls the Exodus, "The First Road Trip," and even has blue paper to represent water. 2 Cedarville nursing students walk in the homecoming parade and show off their colorful scrubs...and a bedpan. 3 Bre Brown, Alyson Wicker, Maggie Casillo, and Hannah Rauch represent license plates to show this year's "Road Trip" theme in the homecoming parade. 4 Aaron Southworth waves and hands out candy to parade watchers. That duck floatie is a big hit with the crowd! 5 The son of an alumnus plays cornhole outside the SSC. It's obvious this kid has a good arm.

CANOE RACE

What is there to do with 73 square feet of cardboard and 100 meters of packing tape? Building a canoe and paddling it across Cedar Lake may not be at the top of most lists, but that is the task given to Cedarville's engineering students. It was a clear, crisp afternoon when the student body gathered around the lake to watch the annual Cardboard Canoe Race. This year's race featured 31 engineering teams as well as 5 department canoes. Two at a time, the canoes entered the lake, each carrying two engineering students as well as a non-engineer passenger. Though the races were timed, many of these amateur shipwrights counted their voyage a success if their canoe managed simply to make it across the lake. Spectators watched as the engineering students carefully paddled their less-than-seaworthy vessels.

It was often the passenger's duty to hold the sides of the canoe upright to keep the boat from filling with water. Their efforts were met with varying degrees of success. Some students actually accomplished their goal and made it all the way across the lake in a respectable amount of time. Others discovered the flaws in their design when their boat sank in the middle of Cedar Lake. Rescue teams paddling sturdy wooden canoes assisted in bringing the stranded students back to shore.

After the race, the top sixteen teams participated in a demolition derby. All canoes were reduced to soggy strips of cardboard. Well, all except one. The library dominated not only the demolition derby, but the department races as well. The education department used their experience with the laminating machine to laminate their canoe, making it indestructible by the water.

This traditional event once again proved an exciting and challenging experience for the students who participated and some afternoon entertainment to those who watched.

"I got wet. Really wet.
And it smelled so bad!
I couldn't wait to take a shower afterwards."

(Brittany Santee)

1 Brittney Morris might not have realized she was going for a swim when she volunteered to join Josh Gunderson's canoe. 2 The Education Department's canoe successfully avoids sinking, though the laminated cardboard may have helped. 3 Engineering students paddle their sinking canoe to the water's edge, desperate to make it across Cedar Lake before the paper and cardboard fail.

FALL PLAY

The Fall Play at Cedarville serves as a chance for many from the community to step onto the campus and see the dedication of both the students and the faculty at Cedarville University. With opening night on Thursday before Homecoming weekend, alumni jump at the chance to see the productions, with evening and matinee shows selling out quickly. The Fall Play was The Importance of Being Earnest, a comedy by Oscar Wilde about pretending to be someone else to escape obligations...and the repercussions that come with it.

"I have always been of opinion that a man who desires to get married should know either everything or nothing," writes Wilde in Earnest. Amy Eiler played the beautiful Gwendolen, and Stephanie Anderson laid claim to the formidable Lady Bracknell. Jordan Hickling and Josiah Smith played the major male leads.

Dave Dion stated, "Working behind scenes lets me see all the technical parts of the show--the costumes, the makeup, the scene setups, the blocking, and all the work--but I still get to enjoy the magic of the play itself."

The plot twists and ironic curves in Earnest forced both the audience (and the actors) to pay attention to the play; what should happen might not happen. Jack and Gwendolen spark a romance—though Jack isn't completely honest about his name—and the lies told in Act I come back to haunt characters throughout the rest of the play. The characters of Earnest unintentionally overcome obstacles through irony and puns, resulting in—of course—a happy ending.

"I always get a ticket in advance because the shows are sure to be packed. Students, faculty, parents, and even outside visitors know the value in attending a Cedarville University play."
(Mandy Allen)

1 Ernest (Jordan Hickling) gives Lady Bracknell (Stephanie Anderson) a look of disgust...or is it confusion? 2 Judging by their faces, Grace Pilet and Amy Eiler aren't very happy with Josiah Smith. 3 Emily Bush as Miss Prism smiles adoringly at Derek Stockwell, who plays Rev. Canon Chasuble.

FALL HAPPENINGS

Labor Day weekend. Since the “father” of Labor Day was born in Cedarville, the parade and fireworks are always worth a weekend trip downtown to CedarFest. This year, the firework display was better than ever, and as the leaves began to fall, the Cedarville campus was filled with events for students to enjoy. The Involvement Fair encouraged both new students and returning students to branch out to the community and, like its namesake, become involved in an activity during their short time at Cedarville.

The Freshman Class started a new event: The Amazing Race. Teams gathered together with a small entrance fee to compete for $100 in prize money. Tasks to finish included building a structure of marshmallows and toothpicks, giant-pin bowling, and clue-solving to find the next location. The winners of the event played hard and received $100 to show for it.

During Fall Back, on Halloween weekend, the streets between Printy and Lawlor were overflowing for the Block Party. As the night grew late, students began to fill the event rooms to watch the twisted film, Inception. Then, on Saturday night, many students gathered to help solve the mystery at Boddy Mansion in a game of Clue.

Moonlight Madness, hosted partially by Jernelle Ward, packed the gym with students jangling their keys. Sitting down was not an option during this basketball season kick-off. The reveal of a new seating section—the Jacket’s Nest—encouraged fans to show their true colors: yellow and blue.

Junior Jam packed the campus with elementary students for a Saturday and challenged Cedarville students to serve as group leaders or committee members. This event was fun for both the children that attended and the Cedarville students that had the chance to interact with the kids. The theme this year was “Extraordinary Examples” and challenged both children and students to be good examples every day.

“I thought the fall street fair held in the Meet Market was great fun! From throwing pumpkins to making cotton candy, and then to painting pumpkins, it was just a fun event. The absolutely frigid weather that day also added to the fun—it certainly didn’t get anyone’s spirits down!”
(Grace Zielger)

1 Junior Jam volunteers clear their busy schedules to lead groups of elementary school students one Saturday in October. 2 JoyAnna McBride helps lead the worship band during the finale of Junior Jam. 3 Taylor Swayze loses himself in his guitar playing at the New Student Talent Show during Dad’s Weekend.

FALL HAPPENINGS

1 Shauna Acheson and Chris Reed lead an "Encounter" worship session in the BTS Youth Ministry room. Worship majors lead "Encounter" multiple times throughout the semester. 2 Stacy Philipps, Jernelle Ward, and Dan Smith don't hold back while hosting Gospel Fest with OneVoice in the DMC Chapel. 3 Sophomore students, including Stuart Li and Emily Sweet, attend the breakfast with Dr. Brown in President's Dining Room. 4 Christopher Hook speaks at the Health Care Ethics Conference, which challenges Cedarville students to question why they believe what they believe. 5 Leland Ryken makes a guest appearance at Cedarville to speak on the importance of being both a Christian and an artist.

HOLIDAYS

Winter's chill blew through Cedarville on the first of December, bringing Christmas trees with presents underneath, wreathes, and icicle lights across the campus. Annual activities were planned; Dr. Brown chose his Christmas picture books; Chuck made his midnight biscuits and gravy; Carl Ruby stayed up all night making cinammon buns; Campus Christmas had arrived.

The night started with Denver and the Mile High orchestra playing jazzy traditional Christmas songs and a few original pieces. Their performance brought in students, staff, and families from the area. Then, Dr. Bill Brown took the stage. He read Christmas stories that included The Night Before Christmas (a classic), My Dad Ran Over a Frog (a tradition), and the original Christmas story of Jesus. Next, the film, A Christmas Carol, starring Jim Carrey, began, and the students filled DeVry Theater and the event rooms quickly. This animated version of the classic story was a wonderful—and haunting—way to get the students into the Christmas spirit.

Chucks opened at nine for the annual midnight breakfast. Karaoke performances entertained the audience all throughout the night, including some interpretive dance. Laser tag and cookie decorating kept the Christmas spirit going all through the evening.

A week of classes ensued, and the next weekend arrived quickly with decorations and other preparations for Christmas open dorms. Unit and hall themes varied from Madagascar to Disney princesses, the circus to Oregon Trail, Mario, the Sound of Music, and the Wizard of Oz...even a castle in Rodgers and New York City in Printy. Students worked hard in perfecting their rooms as well as their roles in the event. Other students went through the mazes and scenery that the dorms had set up and enjoyed the efforts the dorms put into making Campus Christmas everything it could be. The festivities were a great way to get away from studying before finals week started.

“When we’re all a little burned out towards the end of the semester, Campus Christmas brings us that Christmas spirit and takes our minds off finals—if only briefly—with some holiday fun.”
(Ben Chasnov)

1 Denver and the Mile High Orchestra entertains Cedarville during the annual Campus Christmas. Their unique sound, a blend of R&B, Jazz, Big Band, even Latin, is a new sound for much of the Cedarville student body. 2 Step into Chucks...in a dorm! Christmas Open Dorms always features well-planned and well-executed themes. 3 Dr. Brown maintains the holiday tradition by reading My Dad Ran Over A Frog. All he needs is a pair of fuzzy slippers... maybe a Christmas gift from Pastor Rohm?

ADMINISTRATIVE COUNCIL

This edition of The Miracle is a fantastic collection of memories from 2010-2011. It was a year where we celebrated Cedarville University's largest enrollment—and then wondered if winter would ever end!

This time next year, the campus will look a lot different than it does now. From the major renovation of The Hill to the construction of the new Health Science Center, Cedarville continues its ongoing development and facelift.

But right now, we can enjoy the memories of great athlete seasons, outstanding dramatic and musical programs, non-stop student events, and memorable chapels. It is not often that you hear a former Mafia don give parenting advice!

Our theme this year, "Real-World Impact; Unafraid and Unashamed," has given us a glimpse of how God wants to use us. Hidden behind the theme is the truth that the "real world" is not the one where things rot, rust, decay and die. This may be the world we live in now, but the real world is yet to come. It is the world we were made for.

Lynne and I wish you all the best as you continue walking with Christ. You will always be a part of the Cedarville University family. Thanks for sharing part of your journey with us.

ACTIVITIES

noun, plural \ak-'ti-və-tēs Opportunities for involved students; symptoms include a closet full of Cedarville t-shirts and a daily-flooded email inbox.

CHAPELS

Cedarville's Chapels this year featured several memorable speakers. Local pastors, like Rob Turner, pastor at Apex Community Church, and David Smith, pastor of Fairhaven Church in Centerville, spoke to the student body. Dr. Brown used almost every Monday to encourage students on "Real-World Impact." He gave the students insight on how to answer some of the tough questions that could be brought up by non-believers or questioning believers, as well as addressing other great topics.

This year, a favorite chapel speaker was Gianna Jessen. Gianna Jessen, a failed-abortion survivor, showed her fiery passion for life in the short time she spoke in chapel. Jessen stated she is grateful for every day that God had given her, and she has dedicated her life to making every day His. Lisa Dykes said, "I really enjoyed hearing her speak because she spoke about not wasting your time on men you have to make excuses for."

Mary Armstrong described her appreciation for Will Schenck. Armstrong appreciated Schenck so much because "he was from an industry we don't often hear about in chapel: Rolling Stone magazine and then fashion. He really embodies the 'real-world impact' Cedarville strives to teach its students."

Other chapel speakers challenged students on an intellectual level, forcing them to integrate biblical learning with secular issues. Ken Ham offered some advice to students: find answers to all questions in Genesis. Mark Yarhouse presented Christian research on a well-publicized subject: homosexuality and who it impacts, as well as what the how the church should respond to an individual struggling with same-sex attraction.

With Justin Spann heading up worship, Cedarville made an effort to add more One Voice chapels, and the students overall really enjoyed this addition. Whether through its music or messages, chapel made an impact on Cedarville students so that they could, in turn, impact their "real worlds."

"It was really great to have the ability to praise God through music for an hour and watch God move through 3,000 people together."

(Kellie Lee)

STUDENT-LED CHAPELS

While student-led chapels had several things in common, each brought something unique to the stage of Jeremiah Chapel.

The freshman class officers' goal was to stick out and be different. "We wanted to be different from normal chapels," Joel Israel, freshman class chaplain, said. For their spring chapel, the class gave away Rinnova gift cards to anyone who could find one of several pairs of flip flops hidden under the pews. But Israel said the biggest change was probably having worship songs after the message.

Matt McDonald, junior class chaplain, said their officers' goal for chapel was to focus on our relation to God. A highlight for McDonald was hearing when his message made a difference in a person's life. "It is so amazing to have testimonies in which the Word of God influences the life of a person in such a way that they change their actions or beliefs in order to glorify God and magnify His name," McDonald said.

Sophomore Class Chaplain Christian Figueredo said he wanted to make sure his messages were focused on God and the Gospel. How did he pick his topics? "Pastor Rohm probably actually gave me the best advice on that," Figueredo said. Since class chaplains only get to speak twice a year, he said Rohm told him to choose something he was passionate about and something he was learning in his own Bible study.

The senior class wanted to keep each chapel centered on a theme, Craig Hefner, senior class chaplain, said. For example, they ended with music so that they could fit it into the theme of the message.

SGA chapel had everything from Star Wars references to the ever-loved chapel movies. But it had more than that. Bob Rohm, Vice President for Christian Ministries, said SGA Chaplain David Moser was able to go deep but still relate what he was speaking on to students' lives. "David is, I think, a brilliant young man who has a passion for God's Word," Rohm said.

"They are always uplifting and encouraging. They're fun to watch and give me another reason to look forward to Fridays."
(Sean Powers)

1 "We tried, as best as we could, to make the chapel flow in a way that made sense and followed our theme for the chapel," says Craig Hefner, senior class chaplain, on delivering his message to the student body during a senior class chapel. 2 Sam Charlier leads guitar in the sophomore class worship band, playing "We Fall Down" by Chris Tomlin, as students sing along. 3 The senior class worship band leads the Cedarville community in praising God at a senior class chapel with music tailored to the chapel message. 4 Sophomore Class Chaplain, Christian Figueredo, makes his point to attentive listeners at a sophomore class chapel. "You can't bootleg The Passion," he claims to illustrate his point.

CLASSES

The thrill of college life begins in mid-August when the flurry of campus events fills up a planner before we can even realize it. Intramural sports, Interruptions, chapel, orgs, friends, ministries -- the possibilities to get plugged in and active at Cedarville are endless. And then, it happens: classes start, and all that free time we students once had to fill with extracurricular activities no longer exists.

Classes are the core of Cedarville and receiving an education. One class that challenged students to think in a manner much different from what they were used to was "Intro to Urban Ministry." This class, though not required by most majors, gathered an assortment of students, some filling electives and others simply interested in Urban Ministry. Nathaniel Bond encouraged even prospective students to take the class, which may be getting a little ahead of the game.

Professor TC Ham started his career at Cedarville this year by taking over some of the Old Testament courses usually taught by Dr. Miller. TC, as he was often referred to by his students, carried on the passion for OT literature found in Dr. Miller's classes and poured that passion into his students' study of the Old Testament.

Bible courses weren't the only ones with such an positive influence on students, however. Dr. Melissa Faulkner's Design of Manuals class wrote a manual in spring semester entitled "Air National Guard Family Guide." This manual provided critical information for the families of Air National Guard members. John Michael Mumme said, "Writing this manual, my classmates and I had the unique chance to work for something beyond a grade. Knowing that what we were writing would be useful and encouraging to all the members of the Air National Guard, seeing the appreciation Mr. and Mrs. Muncy expressed, made the long and stressful hours of writing this manual more than worth it."

"I'm even planning on taking his Development class next year because I enjoy his teaching style so much. You can really tell he likes what he's teaching."

WOMEN'S RESIDENCE LIFE

Residence life has been an integral part of Cedarville University. Women's residence halls were often the center for socialization. Community lounges filled with groups looking for an area to watch a movie or hardcore game-watchers staring intently at the TVs. During those special times each semester—open dorms—the women in the residence halls were well aware of the massive amount of cleaning before the men could enter the world of women.

Beyond the normal everyday activities, the women appreciated the events that were arranged for the whole dorm to enjoy together. For example, the annual Printy Wars involved much planning, and they would often break campus quiet hours. All of the girls gathered in the parking lot every year, and units battled each other through exciting games headed by the RAs. Only the strongest and most creative girls could win. Lawlor boys as well as other girls' dorms gathered to watch as Printy girls dressed up in costumes and performed tasks such as passing an orange by the neck or passing a sponge full of water without squeezing. Printy also started the PMS panel this year: Pressure, Men, and Self-Image. This panel called in speakers like Dean Gibbs to speak to the Printy girls on current issues about these three topics.

Willetts enjoyed their first Printy-like experience as the girls also competed in battles against each other, from "best toilet paper mummy" to high-heeled egg-passing races. Willett's Wazoo was able to push the girls to the limit and create a new atmosphere of competition.

From costumes and competitions to prayer and laughter, the women's residence halls never experienced a dull moment. The women of God molded at Cedarville University will hold on to their experiences and relationships formed for years, even if it started with a competitive spirit over a Printy-Maddox football game.

"Between decorating for Campus Christmas and random late night fire alarms, you develop relationships with people you otherwise never would!"

(Micaela Buesgens)

MEN'S RESIDENCE LIFE

When more than one thousand guys are trying to make it for nine months in a small, Ohio town on an even smaller college campus, there is bound to be both some great times and some challenging ones. Cedarville's men's residence life had both.

As for fun, several men's dorms stuck with tradition. Residents of Lawlor Hall participated in events such as Lawlorpalooza and Lawlor (K)night. At Lawlor (K)night, Rob Turner, pastor at Apex Community Church in Dayton, spoke about biblical manhood.

"We didn't try to break much new ground this year," said Anthony Mandela, Resident Director of Lawlor. "We continued with the dorm events that have worked well for us in the past and have been encouraging and enjoyable for the guys." He described life in Lawlor as "Brotherhood. Growth. Fun."

Other men on campus had some spontaneous fun as well. When an ice storm hit Cedarville and school was canceled, the guys on the Hill decided they were hungry. "We kind of did a dorm-wide Rip Run," the Hill Resident Director, Adam McCune, said. He claimed they cleaned out the store. Likewise, for fun, Rickard residents participated in Man Week, where they lived like men for a week, as if that were much different than every other day.

In addition to fun, Cedarville men also had to deal with some challenges this year. Those at the Hill had to prepare to live in a renovated version of their dorm. "There's been some community challenges just in preparing for this big building change," McCune said.

The way guys at Brock dealt with challenges was the favorite part of the year for Justin Dodson, resident director. He said there is nothing greater than a man who has the humility to admit he needs help and another man coming alongside willing to invest in his life. "That is not just Student Life, but real life beyond Cedarville, and there is nothing I love more than seeing people dig into each other's lives in significant ways so that they continue in that when they leave here," Dodson said.

"At 1 a.m., Marshall 3 comes alive. These bonds and memories are forever forged in the book of my life."
(Dan Bidlack)

1 Looks like this squad of superheroes is ready to protect Lawlor from any foe. 2 These well-armed boys look ready to take on any invaders that managed to get past the superheroes outside. 3 Guitar players, like John Teat, abound in the dorm, often filling the halls of the men's dorms with (sometimes) beautiful music. 4 Who knows where they're going, but these Lawlor residents are certainly excited about it.

CHUCKS, HIVE, & RINNOVA

Chucks has been feeding the hungry masses of students for years, and usually Cedarville students leave its cafeteria well fed and full. But like all things in life, day after day of the same food can become routine, and Cedarville students soon crave a little excitement and creativity in their dining options. The self-cook line and sandwich smashers offered alternatives to the Home Cooking and Grill line, and these make-your-own choices often had long lines of students waiting to try their hand at cooking, Chuck's style. This year, the addition of rotisserie chicken to the Chuck's menu became another meal option, and daily chicken specials made Chuck's already limitless number of choices even more varied.

Perhaps a picnic outside sounds more appealing—though not in the middle of December. Many students used the first warm days of spring and last warm days of fall to grab a transfer meal at the Hive—Stinger pizza being one of the best—and sit out by the lake for pleasant atmosphere, company, and food. During the winter months, a transfer meal may not have been necessary because some lucky students could win a free pizza at Thursday Night Trivia or spend some time with a smoothie enjoying an Interruption on the Hive stage.

Finally, a staple in the college student's life: caffeine. Rinnova offered quick, easy, and well-priced coffee on campus... plus it tasted great, too. For those not into plain coffee, Rinnova offered a White Nova or a Chai. New to the Rinnova area this year was the Rinnova internet café, a study area with computers for those students that like to have coffee at the tips of their hardworking fingertips. More computers were added at the beginning of spring semester to keep up with the high demand for the area, and apparently, the busyness of the lower SSC didn't keep students from getting homework done.

"Rinnova is the perfect place to grab a drink on the way to class or enjoy a coffee with a friend. Friendly baristas, awesome drinks, and a great place to socialize on campus."
(Shea Hansen)

1 Lunchtime at Chucks is a busy place. Students rush in to get food, but, in the process, find a little time to stop and chat with friends in the lines. 2 Kayla Girtz uses her meal time to multitask: eat and study. Here at Cedarville, every spare minute must be utilized! 3 The sandwich line is always a popular food option in Chucks. The combinations are endless, and the sandwich smashers make meals that much better. 4 Marcia Pinkerton takes a gulp of her Rinnova drink outside the Hive; nothing like a little caffeine to help power a college student through the day, and Rinnova is just where to find that!

INTERRUPTIONS

For students looking to hang out and experience new styles of music, Cedarville had just the thing. On Tuesday and Thursday nights, Interruptions showcased the musical talents of Cedarville students and gave aspiring musicians a chance to perform in front of a live audience. "I love playing Interruptions," said senior Taylor Valarik, who played his eighth and final feature Interruption in February. "They're super chill, your friends come out and support you, and it's awesome to be able to be creative and play the kind of music you want, in any style you want." Valarik performed with his fiancé, Rachel Lee. Levi Crowley, a senior, played three Interruptions. He said, "Many people approach Interruptions as a concert, but I prefer to think of it as an opportunity to make music and hang out with friends."

Styles ranged from acoustic to bluegrass to rap. Some students performed by themselves or in a duo, while others played in a large band. Musicians performed original songs as well as covers of favorite or well-known artists. Alison McQuarry began writing songs over the summer, and after performing at some coffee shops, she decided to share her music by playing an Interruption. "It was a lot of fun getting to play for my friends!" she said. Brandon Olinger enjoyed performing with a group, playing original songs as well as a lot of classic rock. He even took requests from the audience.

Each Interruption was a unique experience, always something new, and, above all, a great way for Cedarville students to enjoy each other's musical talents. With a coffee or smoothie from Rinnova, some homework, and a group of friends, the Hive was the best place to spend a relaxing weeknight.

"Hearing and enjoying other students play is fun and highly encouraging. Participating in Interruptions is going to be one of my best memories from my time here."
(Matthew Dix)

1 Students gather outside the lower SSC to watch Interruptions in the early fall; tables make the area great for getting homework done, or at least looking like homework is getting done.

2 Grayson Cato and Hayden Browning pair up for their Interruption between the lake and the hill outside the SSC. Before the weather can turn cold, this provides the perfect location for a break from studying. 3 Students watch Rachel Lee and Taylor Valarik sing and play in the Hive. These two aren't just an Interruption duo...they're also engaged! 4 Taylor Swayze and Brandon Cruise entertain students looking for a break at their ALT night Interruption following TRON.

IN TOWN

Many students find Cedarville's quaint, small-town feel appealing, though their hometown background is varied. Whether living on or off campus, students appreciated the quiet, homey atmosphere. Some found Cedarville a great place for biking or just going for a walk. Others enjoyed town festivities like parades and fireworks, and especially the annual Labor Day celebration.

Cedarville's two coffee houses, Stoney Creek Roasters and Beans-n-Cream, were a big hit with students. When getting off campus was a necessity, these were the places to do it. "I like hanging out at Beans-n-Cream for a lot of reasons," said Elizabeth Patterson. "They have a lot of really good food and drink choices, the cozy, eclectic atmosphere is good for doing my homework or reading or just hanging out with friends, and I LOVE all of the artwork and handcrafted things they have on the walls and for sale."

Right across Main Street from the University campus was Winner's Village Market. A convenient stop for groceries and other miscellaneous necessities, Winner's was frequented by students, at all hours of the day and night, even five minutes before curfew.

Other attractions in town included Subway, which, by being within easy walking distance from the campus, often became a supertime alternative to Chuck's. Colonial Pizza was popular around dinnertime, too, and recent renovations made the most of space. Students either dined at the restaurant, enjoying its unique atmosphere, or took advantage of the delivery service that would bring a pizza right up to any dorm on campus.

And, as if all this weren't enough, the word was that Cedarville would be getting a Chinese restaurant sometime soon. Returning students looked forward to enjoying a new addition to the little town of Cedarville.

"The coffee houses are convenient because they are nearby and provide a pleasant change of scenery."
(Elizabeth Patterson)

1 Wolves at the Gate, a band with members of Cedarville alumni, hold a concert at Alford Auditorium. This is their second concert at Cedarville. Their previous concert, last year, was well attended by students, and this year called for a repeat. 2 Sam Armstrong and Garrett DeRossett perform an Interruption at Beans n' Cream on February 25 with their band Norwegian Forrest Cats. 3 Joy Fagan is interviewed by a film project at Stoney Creek Roasters. The relaxing and homey atmosphere of Roasters provides the ideal backdrop for studying, a coffee break, or a DTR. 4 A group of Cedarville students including Suzanne DeValve, Cheryl Still, Debra Thompson, and Laura Kramer celebrate Labor Day weekend by enjoying a pancake breakfast at the Cedarville firestation.

INTRAMURALS

The sweat dripped off her nose. She knew time was running out, but she knew what was at stake. The t-shirt.

Every year Cedarville offers students a chance to live the dream. It never fails that every year the coveted intramural champions t-shirt is one of the most sought after prizes across Cedarville's campus (almost more than the 4.0 mugs). Teams entered sports like soccer, basketball, dodgeball, even wallyball for just a chance at wearing those shirts on a casual Friday. Students worked long and hard, building the ultimate team, just so they could have the chance of earning one of those championship t-shirts.

Of course some goals are nobler than the players that strive for the t-shirt prize. Their motivation lay in an attempt to salvage their sanity amidst exams, papers, and projects. Intramurals gave students a much-needed break to work out their pent-up energy on the field or court.

Whatever the end goal, intramurals provided Cedarville's students with a chance to stretch their legs and participate in healthy competition. In sports, it's never really about winning anyway... right?

"Dodgeball this year was incredible. Coming in and knowing the competition, I didn't know how far we could get, but we made it far and won the championship. Dodge these!"
(Jennings Gardner)

1 Sand volleyball is definitely a student favorite as it can feel like being at the beach. And in the middle of Ohio, students need a taste of the beach whenever they can get it! 2 Indoor soccer gives students the chance to work on their footwork even during the temperamental Ohio winters. 3 Dodgeball can be quite the heated competition as nothing gets the adrenaline flowing like chucking foam balls at high velocity towards fellow students. 4 Cedarville provides students with excellent facilities to play intramurals.

MINISTRIES

noun, plural \ 'mi-nə-strēs \ A chance for Cedarville students to reach out to the community through service; sometimes takes the place of homework and studying, though this is not advised.

BIRCH MOUNTAIN CENTER

COMMUNITY MINISTRIES

Community ministries at Cedarville equipped students for lifelong leadership and service through partnerships with local churches and community organizations. These volunteer ministry opportunities provided a context where students could apply what they learned in chapel and the classroom in order to make a powerful impact for Christ by meeting real needs in our surrounding communities. These communities surrounding Cedarville contained hospitals, detention centers, faith-based ministries, and many other types of organizations, which Cedarville students involved themselves in throughout the year.

With all of these choices, the community outreach teams allowed students the opportunity to choose ministries related to their areas of study, personal interests, talents, and experiences. This opportunity encouraged the student body not only to maintain their personal involvement in the local church through weekly attendance but also to utilize their God-given abilities to serve Him right here in Cedarville.

“The King will reply,
‘I tell you the truth,
whatever you did for one of the least of these brothers of mine,
you did for me.’”
(Matthew 25:40)

1 The Sophomore Class Ministry doing spring cleaning in the park involved a fresh coat of paint. 2 Cedarville students, Stuart Li, Austin Bush, Bayer Watson, and Michelle, go to work on the Ronald McDonald house. 3 Cedarville students volunteer at the park in Cedarville town and help by cleaning up trash and painting the gazebo 4 Josh Schindehette, Sean Powers, Dave Kauffman, Melody Lightner, Meredith Sumner, Michael Leonzo, Natalie Tribbett, Josh Prommel, Lindsay Smith, Elizabeth Hansel, Alex Boucher, Crystal Groves “unload” at the Greene County Jail for their ministry.

MISSIONS TRIPS

Mission Involvement Services sent four teams to four different countries over Spring Break, and they each had opportunities to serve in unique ways.

Assistant Professor of Finance Jeff Guernsey led business students from SIFE to Bolivia. Brian Nester, Director of MIS, said this was the first team to go to Bolivia since he has been working with MIS. On their trip, students did a business analysis for a business that World Venture missionaries had started.

Another team went to Mexico to do camps for missionary kids. Nester said this trip has been repeated for the last eight years. The team did a camp for eight to twelve-year-olds and a camp for those thirteen and up. Nester said some missionary kids who were in the United States flew back to Mexico just so they could attend the camp.

Sophomore Ruthie Ray said the team that went to Peru to help at childcare centers “really bonded” and “created friendships that hopefully will last a lifetime.” “The most memorable moment was when our leader, Ken, was trying to tell the kids to sit down, or sentarse, but instead, he kept saying siete, or seven. The poor kids were so confused because they couldn’t understand why he was yelling the number seven at them!”

Eleuthera in the Bahamas was the destination of the fourth team. They ministered to kids and through construction. Two of the people who hosted the team were Cedarville graduates.

Though Nester didn’t go on a Spring Break trip and usually doesn’t, he said a highlight for him is sending off and picking up the teams. He likes to meet them at the airport when they return. “I get to hear their stories right off the plane,” Nester said.

“I like to hear their stories right off the plane.”

DISCIPLESHIP

Cedarville students heard a lot about the various ministries and outreach opportunities sponsored by SGA or other student organizations on campus. These activities were advertised in chapel, through email, and on posters and T-shirts seen throughout campus. But Cedarville University sponsored one ministry, operating all year long, that impacted the lives of many students, even if it wasn't spoken of often. That ministry was Cedarville's Discipleship ministry.

Discipleship Groups were formed at the beginning of fall semester and continued to meet throughout the rest of the school year. Freshman Becca Powlus participated in one of these groups. "I joined a discipleship group this year because I wanted to be challenged spiritually and to have a chance to develop some close friendships with other girls that I could be accountable to," she said. Discipleship Groups provided a great opportunity for fellowship, accountability, and spiritual growth. For one hour each week, students had a chance to forget about homework and other responsibilities and just engage in fellowship with other believers in an environment that was both challenging and encouraging. Some groups focused their study on a book dealing with a specific topic, while others worked through a book of the Bible. Powlus said of her experience, "It was eye-opening, convicting, frustrating, challenging, yet encouraging all at the same time."

Ves Rieches, a senior, was blessed by the opportunity to be a Discipleship Leader since his sophomore year. He spoke of his experience as both a challenge and an incredible blessing. As his senior year drew to a close, he reflected, "Cedarville would not have been the same without Discipleship ministries."

"Perhaps the biggest lesson I learned or realized was that I cannot lead a Bible study effectively if I am not in the Word myself."
(Ves Rieches)

1 Discipleship groups help students to focus on the Bible 2 Even while fitting six girls into a dorm room, Bible studies manage to let students open up to each other. 3 Prayer is a big part of discipleship groups. Members often take turns sharing specific requests before they all share in a time of prayer. 4 Sometimes the best thing students can offer each other is a listening ear.

HEARTSONG

Several changes occurred in the Christian Ministries Division touring ministry this year, ranging from organization adjustments to an additional ministry focus.

Jim Cato, Executive Director of HeartSong Ministries, said the touring teams under went the biggest change in the 25 years he has been involved in the ministry. The Touring Teams department of The Master's Puppets, Lifeline Players, and East to West no longer existed because HeartSong Ministries replaced it.

The department consisted of five HeartSong teams. With the reorganization, there was a new focus on ministering to middle school age children, so two of these teams, Heartsong: Generation teams, focused on that age group.

A third new change had to do with summer ministry locations. One HeartSong team was at Lake Ann Camp in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan all summer. They had never had a team there all summer, Cato said.

Chloe Heckman, a vocalist on HeartSong, said going to Lake Ann Camp during the school year was a highlight for her. She talked about driving in the "crazy snow" for ten hours to get there. The camp was like Narnia, Heckman said. "We were out in the middle of God's creation." While there, she said she had the most engaging worship experience she had been a part of.

Heckman's goal for the year was to make herself invisible, making it all about God. "I think it's really easy, especially for me, to be too caught up in that," she said of being up front leading. Her goal came from John 3:30: "He must increase, but I must decrease."

Cato had a goal for the year, too. He said they established that they needed to better teach the reality that the Gospel is to be lived out. "The Gospel is not something that we just accept at one time," Cato said.

"He must increase, but I must decrease."
(Chloe Heckman, referring to her goal for the year according to John 3:30)

MUSIC GROUPS

Every year, musical groups on campus worship together through the teams provided by the music department. These groups include Women's Choir, Men's Glee Club, Concert Chorale, and One Voice.

In addition to performing in separate concerts and chapel services, each group has the opportunity to bless other places with their praises. Musical group teams toured and served different churches in worship, even over Spring Break; One Voice will have the opportunity to worship in Australia this summer. No matter what the opportunity, the students involved in Cedarville's music groups were truly blessed by the experience.

Teams used different genres to minister to listeners. Jubilate singers focused their talents on pieces that were more contemporary, while Concert Chorale dedicated more time on classic worship pieces. One Voice was purely unique in the way that they performed, employing a gospel perspective of worship. Women's Choir and Men's Glee Club were teams composed of one gender, forming a group with a unison choir; their music tended to be a mix of musical styles.

Though each group tended to sing separately, all groups (except One Voice) came together for one large performance with the classical band. This year, the collaborated group performed pieces by Leonard Bernstein and learned the piece from a guest conductor. The groups blended in perfect harmony, creating an outstanding version of the pieces. One Voice blessed the chapel experience several times and really kept the student body aware of God's mercy and grace. One student, Allie Hundley, said that her experience was not just a musical blessing. "Not only has One Voice taught me so much about what it means to worship with true freedom, but it's also my second family." This was true of all of the choirs; they quickly became dependant on each other and became like a family.

MISSIONS CONFERENCE

Through the flags waving in the DMC to the display tables set up throughout Alumni Hall, missionaries from all over the world welcomed students back from winter break. The annual missions conference brought in missionaries, mission speakers, and Bible scholars to challenge the student body to think outside the realm of the “Cedarville Bubble.” The whole goal of the missions conference was to expose the student body to the many cultures and people groups that still need a clear representation of the gospel, which was reflected in this year’s theme, “Redeem Lives, Restore Hope.”

The missions conference provided students who were considering going into the field with connections and wisdom from those who were already living their callings, as well as helping many students realize their calling toward missions for the first time. The conference also allowed students to see how their specific area of academic training and personal interests could be used to benefit the mission field. The keynote speaker, Dr. John Barnett, emphasized this by reminding Cedarville that we are all missionaries, in whatever field or whatever city we end up; we are called to do our part to reach “Jerusalem, Samaria, and the uttermost parts of the world.”

“Therefore go and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, and teaching them to obey everything I have commanded you. And surely I am with you always, to the very end of the age.”
(Matthew 28:19-20)

- 1 During the Missions Conference, all of the attending missionaries give a brief introduction of themselves. All the introductions are given on the first night, so they have to be quick about it!
- 2 The Missions Conference is one of the few times during the year that Cedarville students are asked to give an offering.
- 3 Some couples are rather familiar with the introduction process as they have been coming to the Missions Conference for many years.

WINTER PLAY

Hello, Cedarville! This winter, the theatre department put on the classic musical Hello, Dolly! Based on The Matchmaker by Thornton Wilder, Hello, Dolly! debuted on Broadway in 1964 with music by Jerry Herman. This dynamic show tells the story of Dolly Levi, self-proclaimed matchmaker in the small town of Yonkers, as she rediscovers what it means to live life to the fullest. Throughout the story she is joined by a whole cast of interesting, spirited characters who add a lively dimension to the show and help remind the audience to embrace life's adventures. The show's energetic songs, dance numbers, and bright costumes made it a spectacular experience for audience members to enjoy.

Putting on a major stage production such as Hello, Dolly! is no small task. Cast members spent hours in long rehearsals learning songs, dance numbers, and lines before finally putting it all together with costumes, hairstyles, make up, and props. Performance weekends were definitely a crazy time for those involved in the show, with multiple performances on some days. All cast members had to get to the theatre early – sometimes as much as four hours early – to put on costumes and make up, and for the girls to get their hair done. But according to Grace Pilet, who played the part of Ermengarde, the performance weekends were the most fun part of the entire process. “We all felt a little silly running into Chuck’s with our crazy hair and make up, but we needed food!” she says. Pilet admits that the process was a lot of hard work, but that it was definitely a great experience to be a part of this show.

Cedarville’s production of Hello, Dolly! was an enormous success, and a lot of fun for performers and audience members alike.

SPRING HAPPENINGS

Spring—a time when the ground thaws, but not in Cedarville. This year particularly held us captive to a harsh winter, but eventually the ground did thaw, and the buds did blossom, and in the meantime Cedarville played in the snow. When the weather got too warm for the snow, late spring thunderstorms held the town of Cedarville under flood and tornado watches for weeks.

Spring semester is a time when freshmen finally have a firm grasp on the culture of college life and can honestly claim to know what they are doing, and seniors start thinking about their good-byes. Second semester plays host to a number of traditions on campus: the Missions Conference, Lil Sibs weekend, Junior Senior, Elliv, and finally graduation.

Among the yearly traditions were a few new events that earned their place in Cedarville's legacy, among them, the International Justice Mission's second annual Impossible Possibilities, a 10k walk/run/relay. This year, the 10K raised over twenty thousand dollars to be donated to a local sex trafficking safe home. "I really loved it. Personally, I really like to run, and this was a great way to do something I enjoy in a competitive manner. And it was for a great cause, which made it all the more delightful," said Chris Pedro, a freshman.

Always tinged bittersweet, students said good-bye at the end of spring, some forever and others just until next fall as students drove their broken and beat up cars home into the summer sun.

As always, Spring semester brought with it the emergence of new couples, Brock to the Rock, campus golf, and other shenanigans that prove students are really just kids trying to have fun.

"Did I hear, 'Brock to the Rock'!?"

LI'L SIBS WEEKEND

Li'l Sibs weekend was a time to catch up with the family and show those younger siblings the fun that occurs on Cedarville's campus. Cedarville students invited their younger siblings for a great weekend with activities that gave siblings the full Cedarville experience. Little brothers and sisters lived the dorm life and could really see what Cedarville has to offer. The fun was endless, and the hardest part, as always, was letting the li'l sibs go home after such fun times together.

The Cedarville Yellow Jackets played an intense basketball game on Saturday night, giving the opposing team a real fight. Brothers and sisters all over the stadium watched in awe as the Jackets went into overtime and fought their way to a well-deserved victory. Beaver-Vu Lanes in Beavercreek opened their doors to anxious late-night bowlers, promoted through Student Life. A special ALT night offered a movie that both younger and older siblings enjoyed: "Up."

Sibs were identifiable not only by their smaller size, but also by the tee shirts that displayed Cedarville's logo and the title of the weekend. Along with the activities that were offered, siblings really enjoyed the fellowship involved in the weekend. They had the option of sleeping in their older siblings' dorms and really experience what college is like. Many also joined their siblings as they went to class, and li'l sibs had the opportunity to see what the average college day was like. Hannah Burns said her favorite part about Li'l Sibs weekend was "just being able to hang out with my sister. It was nice to stay in the dorm and to go to the game and just have a fun time together." Li'l Sibs weekend gave Cedarville students a taste of home while still here at school.

SPRING PLAY

Drama at Cedarville this year focused on the comedic fallout of mistaken identities. In April, much like the Fall performance of The Importance of Being Earnest, the Cedarville University Theatre Department presented another comedy of errors, See How They Run, the classic English farce by Phillip King.

In this production, the sporadic comings and goings of an actor (Clive), actress (Penelope), cockney maid (Ida), four men in clergy suits (Lionel, Bishop, Reverend Humphrey, and The Intruder) and a church-going scold (Miss Skillon) who unknowingly gets into the cooking sherry, all contributed to a presentation of mistaken identities and constant laughter from the Cedarville student body, faculty, staff, and community.

According to the Dramaturg, Katherine Nelson, “See How They Run honestly portrays the culture of life during World War II and did not remove audience members of the time from their struggles. Rather, the play showed them the potential for humor in the conflicts.”

Many of the cast members, including Dylan Cimo, who played the part of Clive, and Josiah Hutchings, who played the part of Lionel, have taken the stage in DeVries Theatre multiple times, but even first-timers Sara Daransky (Penelope) and Emily Dykeman (Ida) wowed the crowd with their performances.

As always, those involved in making this play a reality did not disappoint the audience. Erin Schultz described the play as “by far the best [she] had ever seen before at Cedarville. It was entertaining and funny from beginning to end.”

“...the best part of the whole experience were the audiences. We received such a phenomenal response and it was pure joy as an actor hearing how much people loved it.”
(Sarah Daransky)

ELLIV

Step right up! Come one, come all, to see the greatest show on campus! And many Cedarville students did just that. On that Saturday night, students flooded the DMC. Groups of students came dressed as characters from movies, video games, and books. Particularly notable themes of the night included a group of guys dressed as army men, complete with their weapons, poses, and platforms to stand on; characters from Mario; and a team on Minions and Gru from Despicable Me. Mostly, those who didn't go as a theme dressed in formal attire.

Designed around a lively circus theme, Elliv opened with a pre-show act that featured an illusionist and a performer who juggled and swallowed fire. To begin the annual show, cannons mounted on either side of the stage fired, and Willow Smith's "Whip My Hair" filled the chapel.

Many diverse performances comprised this year's Elliv. Musical performances of popular songs such as "Don't Stop Believing" and "Living on a Prayer" were a hit, as was "Hey Jude," performed in a tribute to The Beatles. Acts this year also featured dancing in its various forms. There was hip-hop, ballet, and swing dancing. Dr. Brown's summary of the year's chapel messages in the form of the "Ask Jack" rap was definitely a quality performance all its own. The tradition of the Elliv Rock was also continued for its second year in a row, as deserving students were recognized for their accomplishments in performing arts, athletics, campus impact, and unique talents. An award was also given for the best campus-wide event of the school year.

More than just providing an evening of fun with friends, Elliv showcased the work of many talented Cedarville students. Elliv proved itself a huge success and was without a doubt the greatest show on campus.

"Elliv was a great time! It was awesome seeing the DMC reconstructed into a circus and being able to see the talents of our peers in each performance. The show really lived up to its motto: 'Step right up!'"
(Sandra Geber)

1 Candy Hill and her back-up dancers start the show off with a bang! Or with a whip, rather.
2 Jordan Doyle and Allistar Littrell challenge Chris Voltz for the position of SGA chaplain. The contenders had some...interesting ideas about how to run chapel.
3 With their performance art presentation, the Army Men won the contest for best costume. They looked so real! Or well, so plastic. Realistically plastic?

ELLIV

1 For the final number, all the performers return to the stage to sing "Hold Your Dream" from the movie Fame. 2 Brad Augustine and Dr. Brown break it down with the "Jack Attack" rap. 3 Richard Lozada tries to woo Hannah Denton during "Just the Way You Are," but she doesn't look like she's buying it. 4 The pre-show starts in true circus fashion with a live fire-handler. 5 Zach Seelye, with back-up from Dexter Carpenter on the bass, sing the Mumford & Sons hit "The Cave" to the excitement of many students.

FACULTY/STAFF of the YEAR

Greg Couser, Professor of New Testament and Greek, viewed his job as more than just a paycheck. He looked at his encounters with others, including students at Cedarville, as an opportunity to advance the kingdom of God.

And this outlook did not go unnoticed. Couser received the Faculty of the Year award March 29 at Faculty Recognition Chapel. He said his family and Bible Department Chair, Chris Miller, did a good job of surprising him and that he did not expect to receive the award. "It was a humbling and sweet surprise," he said.

Couser certainly liked teaching college students. "I enjoy being able to teach the word of God to a group of people who are just at a crucial point in their lives," he said. "They are finding out what they really believe and how that affects their life."

When Couser was not teaching, he could often be found investing in students' lives. "I have lots of students that come to my office to talk about all kinds of stuff," he said. Couser and his wife even counseled couples that were getting married.

Kylee Husak, President of Student Academic Advisory Board, said, "Dr. Couser has a really good reputation at Cedarville."

Kim Ahlgrim, Staff Member of the Year, earned her Bachelor's degree at National Louis University in education. She earned her Masters at Wright State University in Marriage and Family Therapy, and at Cedarville, she specialized in Presentations, Group Dynamics, and Student Success. She enjoyed caring for her family, reading, seeing the ocean, researching genealogies, studying history, and collecting antiques. She made an impact on several students' lives, dedicating her time and energy to helping students become the best they could be.

Kim Ahlgrim impacted so many lives, and this award provided the Cedarville community the opportunity to thank her for her service.

HONORS CHAPEL

Close to a hundred academic awards and scholarships were given out at Academic Honors Day Chapel. "It was cool to see Cedarville recognize the efforts of the quality individuals who walked across the stage to receive well-deserved awards," Justin Nichols said. Nichols received the Roloff Incentive Award. This was awarded to a biological sciences student who was involved in community service or leadership roles.

Rachel Greenwood, a psychology major, also wanted to use her career to help those who need help. "I would love to work with those living in the inner city that cannot afford counseling, but are in need of love and restoration," she said after accepting the Kimberly S. Ahlgrim Counseling Scholarship.

Other awards include the Sandra Harner Technical and Professional Communication Scholarship, presented to William Brannon, and the Mary Jane DeBlanc Missions Award, given to Julie Christiansen.

The Academic Honors Day Chapel is an encouragement to all students, both who receive awards and who do not. For students who do: their hard work and time have received attention, and those late library nights are not pointless; for students who don't: more of a push for the next year.

"Therefore, since we are surrounded by such a great cloud of witnesses, let us throw off everything that hinders and the sin that so easily entangles, and let us run with perseverance the race marked out for us."

(Hebrews 12:1)

JUNIOR/SENIOR BANQUET

Cedarville's Junior/Senior banquet, affectionately known as JS, is a formal event organized by the junior class in honor of the graduating seniors. This year's theme, Urban Interference, incorporated the idea that the heartbeat of a city is found in its art, music, and industry. Holding true to the theme, this year's surprise location was held at the East Club Lounge in Paul Brown Stadium, nestled within the heart of Cincinnati. The venue encouraged a less formal atmosphere as it boasted of fresh, vibrant, and creative table settings, decorations, and dress attire.

As far as JS interfering, it did that as well. Saturday night the monotony of daily life was broken as half of the student population headed to overlook the cityscape of Cincinnati and of course the Bengals field to enjoy a night of dinner, music, and dates. Stars Go Dim, a band that had previously opened for Switchfoot and Daughtry, provided the entertainment for the night. Their melodious indie/modern pop-rock sound and authentic lyrics provided the soundtrack to a night full of swagger and fun. It was a night made for memories as the senior class spent one of their last evenings amongst the friends who had become more like family.

"JS was a great last hurrah before graduation. I had a blast catching up with everyone, and I didn't mind having an excuse to dress up and get the group together for one last night out. It was definitely a great way to end senior year."

SENIOR RECEPTION

Upon stepping foot on the campus, students are introduced to the man, the myth, the legend that is Dr. Brown. He is Cedarville's biggest celebrity. To get a nod of approval, or a friendly "how are you" from Dr. Brown is a highlight for any day. Underclassmen may be wondering where he lays his head at night, secretly wishing to get an inside look into his life. Then after four years, it happens—the senior reception at Dr. Brown's.

Every year the Brown family is gracious enough to open their home to the graduating class. Students wore their Sunday best while they munched on hors d'oeuvres of cheesecake balls, fruit tarts, and sparkling punch. But the real highlight was the grand tour of the Browns' home given by Dr. Brown himself. He guided students through his home, graciously allowing them to poke through his personal life. As a side note, upon the tour, some students happened to notice, Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows on his library shelf. They thought Dr. Brown couldn't get any cooler, but he did.

The afternoon culminated in personal conversations with our President and a photograph to remember the moment. The senior reception at Dr. Brown's is always a highlight as students get to make last memories with their friends and spend time with our beloved president, Dr. Brown.

COMMENCEMENT

Rear Admiral Dr. Barry C. Black, 62nd Chaplain of the U.S. Senate, challenged the 608 graduates at Cedarville University's 115th commencement ceremony to be open about their faith through the hope found in a risen savior.

"There will come days when your dreams may dry up," shared Black. "I challenge you to stay strong and continue to believe."

Cedarville President Dr. Bill Brown conveyed to the class a message on rising above the norm.

"When everyone around you is looking for an easy path," shared Brown, "your commitment to excellence and quality should stand above the rest."

Also, during commencement, three graduates were honored with the University's most prestigious student award. The President's Trophy, the highest honor for a graduating senior, recognizes leadership, ministry, community and campus involvement, athletic performance, and academic achievement. The recipients were Emily Shanahan, a communication studies major from West Carrollton, Ohio; Emily Chiu, early childhood education major, from Vestal, N.Y.; and Andrew Barfell, biology major, from North Royalton, Ohio.

After the ceremony, excited graduates spent the day taking pictures with their families and saying good-bye to their friends through tears. But commencement is a beginning: the beginning of each student's life after college.

"Graduation was the perfect way to end my time at Cedarville; I loved being able to graduate with my friends and share that time with my family."

1 Jernelle Ward joins in the class song along with the her fellow graduates. 2 Tim Lukasiewicz, Garrett Rucinski, and Zach Seelye sing the class song, "Beautiful." 3 Dr. Brown address the graduates, calling them to make "slam dunk" choices.

COMMENCEMENT

1 The graduates eagerly await the moment when they can walk across the stage and shake Dr. Brown's hand and receive their diploma. 2 Dr. Barry C. Black gives a rousing address to the graduates. He even started with a joke about putting bologna in your own life. 3 Andrew Barfell accepts his President's Trophy from Dr. Brown. 4 Few dry eyes are left at the ceremony as Emily Shanahan accepts her award from Dr. Brown. 5 Emily Chiu graciously receives her President's Trophy from Dr. Brown.

YEARBOOK STAFF

Layout staff,

I'd like to take some time to thank the three dedicated people on Layout Staff this year: Terri Elgersma, Peter Arthur, and Kelly Shaw. Your help with the book this year made my job much easier. I appreciate the three of you putting up with me especially since I'm two years behind the rest of you and wasn't sure what I was doing half of the time. Thanks for always turning in your assignments on time even at the end of the year when things got crazy. I will definitely miss filling your inboxes with mile-long emails of instructions. I wish the best to you all as you graduate and thanks so much for your help with this year's book. I could not have done it without you.

Kathryn Kramer

Dearest photo staffers,

Thank you for putting up with copious amounts of email and requests for coverage and hasty uploads. It's been a great year, and a privilege to work with such a talented group of photographers. You've brought your own creativity and personality through while still providing such awesome pictures to help remember the year. I want to especially thank Stuart, Caleb, and Cameron, because you guys literally seemed to be everywhere at once, always shooting and submitting the most fantastic photos. To my whole staff: you rock. Fo' realz.

Tyler Scott

To my writers:

Thank you for putting up with me this year. You guys were really great about getting deadlines in... even when I didn't exactly give you much time to get them in. Zack, though you came on late in the year, thanks for coming through when I needed a new copy writer. Christina, you were excellent! You were always willing to tackle those pieces and get them in for me, and you were AMAZING about getting it in on time. Dani, way to stick with me even when you had to email me to remind me about something. Megan, thank you for coming through in a clutch; I desperately needed more copy staff and there you were! You all were outstanding this year. Thank you, I couldn't have done it without you all!

COLOPHON

Publisher

The 2011 Miracle was published by Jostens, Inc. It was printed at their plant located in State College, PA. The Jostens representative was Eric Howard, and the plant coordinator was Crystal Gault.

Cover

The cover is custom screened and is custom art designed by Nathan Anderson.

Paper Stock

The paper for this book is 80# gloss finish. 256 all color pages were used.

Color

The 2011 Miracle was printed with four color process ink.

Design

The 2011 Miracle yearbook design theme was created by Nathan Anderson, and other design work is credited to Kathryn Kramer and Brent Persun.

Theme

The 2011 Miracle theme was a combined brainstorm of the editorial staff with input and commentary from the Miracle staffers.

Production

The 2011 Miracle was produced on IBM computers. Layouts were created using Adobe InDesign CS4 and CS5. Photos were cropped, resized, edited using Adobe Photoshop CS4 and CS5. Copy was typed in Microsoft Word and then imported into InDesign.

Typography

The main fonts used in the book are Latin Modern Roman and CartoGothic. Stories are 10 point Latin Modern Roman. Captions are 11 point CartoGothic. Titles and divider text are various sizes of Bernard Helvetica Neue. Page numbers are 15 point CartoGothic.

Photography

The majority of pictures were taken by Tyler Scott and his photography staff. Student submissions were also accepted. Several photos were also taken by Scott Huck, photographer for Cedarville University. Jim Rainey acted as the DaVor representative for portraits.

EDITOR'S PAGE

Well first I want to say thank you to my editorial staff. I didn't always know how to tell you what I wanted, but you managed to do a pretty good job anyway. Special shout out to Kathryn who definitely did an amazing job. And to Cyndi who has been so supportive throughout this whole publication process.

I also want to say how incredibly thankful I am to my amazing professors, especially Mrs. Harner and Dr. Heath, both of whom have taught me so much about writing and life.

Finally I want to say how much I love all my friends who have been with me through this rather insane final semester of my undergrad career. All of you are so fantastic, and I will cherish all our memories together.

And now I'm moving to Boston!

—Brent
